

CRATER FIRES ARE GIVING GREATEST SHOW SINCE '94

(Star-Bulletin by Mutual Wireless)
HILO, Hawaii, June 6.—This is declared to be the most spectacular day in the history of the volcano of Kilauea since 1894. Late yesterday the "bottom fell out of Kilauea" as enthralled spectators expressed it and the lava sank 300 feet in four hours. The earthquakes are continuing, the sides of the crater crushing down to the bottom of the pit, falling in great masses into the seething sea below the rim. There is much excitement on the Big Island.

Wireless advices from A. N. Campbell, vice-president and a director of the Hilo Railroad, who is on Hawaii looking after Hilo Railroad affairs, tell of a magnificent display at Kilauea.

"Spent remarkable day at Halemauau," he wirelessed to R. W. Shingle. "Lake fell 300 feet. Tremendous fall of all the benches. Large lake 600 feet down still boiling. Avalanches continue. Jaggar says lake will probably rise again. This is the most wonderful day since 1894. The spectacular show still continues."

LOCAL CHINESE SAY LI IS GOOD MAN FOR TIME

"If Yuan Shih-Kai had used the same ability and courage in working for the people of China that he did in trying to better his own position, he would have been a great hero in China," said Col. Gen. D. J. Wudan today when asked to give his ideas on the Chinese situation.

"Yuan had courage, and China will not see a man like him again soon. There is no other man in China today who would have the courage to take the stand that Yuan did. He was a clever man, with big ideas, and it is unfortunate that he could not have used his talents for the benefit of the Chinese people."

That Li Yuan Hung will remain as president of China until a general election can be called is the belief of many of the Chinese in Honolulu. At the present time there are three men who will be candidates for the office of president. Dr. Sun Yat Sen of the Nationalists, Sun Chun Sen of the Progressives and Dan K. Sue, the newly appointed premier at Peking. Plans to elect a new congress or reestablish the old congress, which were abandoned by Yuan Shih-Kai, will be the first move, according to local Chinese, and the new congress will then proceed to elect a new president.

Li Yuan Hung, the new president of China, was the first military governor to declare independence of the Manchu dynasty in 1911 at the time of the first revolution. He has been a military man all of his life, and was at one time prominent in the diplomatic ranks.

Li Yuan Hung received his education in China, and upon leaving school joined the naval corps, where he was promoted. During the Japanese-Chinese war he commanded a torpedo boat which was blown up by the Japanese. The young commander stayed with his ship until the end, finally jumping into the sea, where he was rescued.

Later he joined the army, where he was given command of a regiment at Hupeh, and when the first revolution occurred took the field against the Manchus. He was elected vice-president of the Chinese republic at the time Yuan Shih-Kai was named president, and has been active in promoting good will among the warring elements.

When asked regarding Li Yuan Hung today Col. Gen. D. J. Wudan, leader of the Nationalist party in Hawaii, said: "Li Yuan Hung is a good man, and the revolutionists would not oppose him. He is honest, but has not the backbone or the courage to make a successful president. He has new ideas and is a friend of the people."

SOCIETY

HERE are hints that will be keenly appreciated by the bride of yesterday, the one of today, and the one of tomorrow, for every woman—every husband as well—has gone through the distress of trying to say something nice about a "perfect nightmare" of a gift. On seeing a collection of wedding presents, Gelett Burgess, inimitable for his ready wit, promptly christened an onyx clock "a cruel stand" and a berry set as "unks," his composite word for "useless gifts."

There really should be a society to protect brides and grooms from the well-meaning friends who present them with things that doom them to everlasting suffering unless their courage to do away with the noisome things is greater than their sentiment and sense of duty. One would like to send apostles throughout the land preaching sermons on the creed that true beauty in gifts is combined with usefulness.

Imagine the joy of the bride if a thoughtful friend presented her with stationery that she could use with pleasure for the first few years of her married life.

Such a gift would be one before which even the satirist Burgess would doff his hat.

The occasion of a wedding is the occasion also for the search for the unusual gift. If the gift is to be a piece of jewelry or silver it is more than ever desirable that something out of the conventional be found; something that will not be hackneyed, stereotyped, too uninterestingly familiar.

But if one knows where to look for unusual pieces of jewelry, many are to be found, for there has been of late a renewal of the art of making and wearing jewelry and a revival in the use of old and unique silver. Women are insisting that their jewels as well as the interior decorations of their homes shall in some way be individual. The old family silver and jewels are always treasured possessions, since they possess some heritage no other piece could have. Heirlooms, hand-wrought pieces, and articles made after one's own design to suit oneself—these are the things that are individual.

Therefore modern makers of jewelry are studying closely the old fine art of jewelry and their setting, often going far afield for their inspiration. Nowadays skilled artisans are carving stones and molding metals and blending colors that have long been the heritage of the East and long overlooked in the West; and they are using their talents to recover the fine workmanship of the old Greek, Roman, and Etruscan goldsmiths.

A modern artist's jewelry is of a frankly barbaric beauty. It is pagan. "Jewelry is a barbarism," it seems to say, "so let us be honestly, proudly, nobly barbaric." There are carved gold shoulder clasps caught with girdles of pearls that meet in front in a jeweled pendant with a Ceylon ruby at its heart. From a rope of pearls swings a Persian tassel of gold and opals foaming with forty thousand seed-pearls, a jewel gorgeous enough to have been inspired for "Scheherazade." A ponderous Russian dog-collar of white silver is set with huge moonstones that catch gleams from all the jewels around it. There are ivory combs of intricate carvings, gold hairpins, old blue Russian buttons of silver and enamel, ornaments of carved Chinese ivory set in carved gold, and ornaments of jewels set in golden lace-work. Distinctly oriental is this leaning towards rich coloring in unusual jewels. But the jewels made by this artist are not all gorgeously oriental. There are necklaces of diamonds and pearls, quaint or slenderly delicate. Such jewels as diamonds and pearls are almost invariably kept without color.

Mr. and Mrs. Willis Walker plan to leave on or about June 6 for Honolulu. They left on Friday for Westwood, Lassen county, taking a number of guests with them in their private car. The Walkers have a palatial country place, a large log house which looks as rustic outside as it is modern and comfortable inside. The place is in the heart of Mr. Walker's lumber camp.

The Walkers are occupying the Philip King Brown's residence at Sea Cliff. With them at present are Mrs. Harry E. Bowen and the Bowen children and Mrs. A. Goodwin Sheldon of New York.

On Wednesday evening Mr. and Mrs. Walker gave a handsome dinner party in honor of Admiral A. J. Martin of Buenos Aires. Admiral Martin, who is a Spaniard, is head of the fleet of Argentina. He is making a visit to this country to study naval affairs.—San Francisco Examiner.

Miss Mary Freer is giving a big barn dance on Saturday night at her home in Belvedere. It is to be a picnic barbecue supper at the Hugo Kell place in honor of the Alhorns of Honolulu.

The party will conclude the day spent at Kentfield, where every one is going to see the historical pageant. There will be no end of house parties for town guests.

Mr. and Mrs. Pierre Moore will entertain the Misses Evelyn Waller and Elise and Jeanette Bertheau for the week-end.—San Francisco Examiner.

Silver bowls filled with old-fashioned garden flowers adorned the dinner table over which Capt. and Mrs. Jarius Moore presided last evening. The affair took place at their quarters at Fort Winfield Scott, and was in compliment to Col. and Mrs. Alfred Hunter and Capt. and Mrs. George T. Perkins, who will leave on the June transport for their new station in Honolulu.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Mrs. Thomas H. Selby, who was seriously ill about a month ago, has entirely recovered. Mrs. Selby has been with Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Ralston in Berkeley since her return from Europe nine months ago, but as Mr. and Mrs. Ralston are going to Honolulu for an indefinite time, Mrs. Selby is now with Mr. and Mrs. Percy Selby in their apartment at Post and Jones street.—San Francisco Chronicle.
